When Dr. Kaneta Lott opened her southwest Atlanta practice back in 1984, she envisioned concentrating exclusively on children. But as her own and those of long time patients grew, and word of their high standards of meticulous care spread, she answered the demand for a broader range of services.

Kaneta Lott DDS

Together with Dr. Aletha Moore and a stellar cast of general dentists and dedicated technicians and support staff they now offer dental services for the entire family. And they do it with a Lott Moore love.

See and hear Dr. Lott explain what it means, how it works, and get a large dose of dental common sense at www.overgroundrr.com.

We're Here To Build Community, Not Cathedrals

Pastor Torrey O. Johnson "We're here to model Christ," declares Pastor Torrey O. Johnson of St. Marks Lutheran Church, "and that means taking the pulse of the community, working with businesses, with other churches and with anyone else for the families of this community."

Pastor Johnson explains how using an African American owned and operated construction company saved hundreds of thousands of dollars in the building of St. Mark's new sanctuary, how the church is serving the community by ministering to youth in East Point, and more at www.overgroundrr.com.

Church-Based Federal Credit Union Ready to Expand

The big difference between banks and credit unions is that all the profits of credit unions are given back to members in the form of higher interest on deposits and CD, and lower interest on loans to its members, explains Bonnie Wilkins of the South Dekalb Church Federal Credit Union..

Bonnie Wilkins

Local churches thinking about establishing their own credit unions don't have to invent the wheel, she adds. South Dekalb Church Federal Credit Union has received approval to bring in more churches outside its original area.

See and hear a little of the hard-earned financial wisdom of this faith-
